You can dine alfresco at street stalls or head for the numerous air-conditioned food courts and fine dining restaurants, which also offer other local and international cuisine. Seafood lovers should head for Kukup, a 10 minutes' drive from Tanjung Piai, the southernmost tip of mainland Asia.

Authentic local favourites:

Laksa Johor

This scrumptious blend of spaghetti, fish curry gravy as well as vegetables is a Johor speciality. It is garnished with pickled white radish, onions, bean sprouts, mint leaves, coriander, cucumber, and added with dash of lime juice with some sambal belacan (chilli paste) on the side.

Nasi Briyani Gam

Unlike other varieties, the nasi briyani gam is cooked by sealing both the rice and meat in a pot using starch or gam so that the meat juices infuse the rice grains. It is then eaten with vegetable dalca, pickles and chutney. This rice dish originates from Batu Pahat.

Mee Bandung

Another Johor speciality is mee bandung, a noodle dish that is eaten with beef slices, prawns, dried shrimps, tomatoes, a boiled egg and a sprinkle of crushed peanuts.

Lontong

First time visitors should try this unique dish – rice cubes eaten with rich vegetable gravy. The gravy is of coconut milk base and contains a generous assortment of vegetables, soybean cake and anchovies. This wholesome meal is complemented by flavoursome chilli paste.

Seafood

Kukup is famous for its fresh and tasty Chinese as well as Malay seafood. Select from an assortment of fish, crab, squid or cockles and have them grilled, steamed or fried. Have your meal while enjoying a scenic view of the sea. Nearby is Kukup Island, the world's second largest mangrove island.
